METROPOLITAN JUDGMENTS.

Mr. Thomas Collects Data on the Offer to Compremise.

An important discussion took place in the board room at the District building Saturday between the Commissioners and the attorney for the District, Mr. S. T. sale at Metzerott's. Thomas. It was all about the forfeiture of the charter of the Metropolitan railroad. The attorney called attention to the offer of $31,000 by the company to compromise the claim of the District of $147,000 against it for paying. The company insisted, Mr. said, that the amount claimed was excessive and that it only owed $31,000 which, together with $8,500 already paid, represented the actual amount the company owed the District for paving, and that the difference between that and the amount claimed by the District is for paving on streets east of the Capitol and west of 17th street before there was any occupation of those streets by the company. Mr. Thomas called for the purpos collecting all data in the hands of Commissioners upon this subject to lay before the committee on Tuesday morning. The matter was the subject of investigation and report by the committee in 1880 and is known as miscellaneous docum No. 38, first session Forty-seventh Coh-

Prof. Thomas Wilson of the Smithsonian Institute, and a member of the club, entertained the Caledonian Club and their ing with a stereontical exhibition of the ruined castles of Scotland, accompanying each view with an historical sketch of the building. AMUSEMENTS.

Mary Howe's Concert.-Mary Howe's success abroad has been such as to excite general interest amongst musicians, and will be a great source of satisfaction to her thousands of friends and admirers throughout the country. Since her last appearance in this section, two years ago, she has been pursuing her studies in company with Mr. Lavin, and during the last six months they have been doing concert work in Italy and Germany. The financial depression in Italy, however, so affected musical matters there that on receiving a fine offer from Mr. Herman Wolff, the leading German manager, they went to Berlin, waere they have been located since December, and singing in the different German cities. At Hamburg, January 9, when Mary Howe appeared with the Von Bulow Philharmonic Orchestra, she had one of the greatest ovations ever given a singer, being called and recalled many times. At Berlin, where both Mr. and Mrs. Lavin sang at the Philharmonic Society, January 20, their success was even greater, and the press notices from every single paper in both cities were generous and hearty in praise of the "American singing pair," as they were termed. These notices entire, with translation, have been reprinted here, to convince every one that this success was genuine and not forced. Their appearance in this city, therefore, Friday, March 2, will have an added interest, be-cause of this addition to their previous good name, and will be an interesting event, musically, this season. Seats are now on Mr. Simon Wolf's Lecture - The next lecture in the course under the auspices of the Young Men's Hebrew Association will be given in the Eighth Street Synagogue tomorrow night. Mr. Simon Wolf will be the lecturer and he will speak upon the life of the late Adolph L. Sanger, one of the most prominent Israelites in America, and who was at the time of his death president of the board of education of New York city. Mr. Wolf's ability as a lecturer is well known, and he will undoubtedly make his subject of unusual interest.

Mme. Yale's Lecture.—On Saturday afternoon next Mme. M. Yale will deliver a lecture at Metzerott Hall to ladies only, in which she will demonstrate that beauty can be cultivated and youth restored and preserved. Mme. Yale is a woman of surpassing beauty, and although now forty-one years of age, looks as fresh and lovely as any girl at eighteen. She illustrates in her own case her preservative method, and will tell her auditors how they may take ad-vantage of her experience and stay the ravages of advancing years. Champion Jim at Metzerott Hall .- John

Donaldson, the trainer of James J. Corbett, the champion of the world, arrived in the city last night. Mr. Donaldson is here for the purpose of arranging the preliminary details for the big boxing exhibition at Metzerott's Hall tonight. In addition to the large program of boxing, wrestling and vaudeville for the night, including sparring and bag-punching by Corbett, a considerable local bill has been arranged. One of the first boxes taken for the show was bought by the wife of ex-Gov. Carroll of Maryland. Society has con-tributed largely toward a big sale. It is announced that this entertainment will be refined and at the same time scientific. Mr. Corbett will appear twice. Once in his exhibition of "bag-punching," and again in a three-round contest with John Donaldson, his trainer and sparring partner. The champion will wear the same suit in which he fought Mitchell. The program is a long one and will consist of the best talent. Fair at Masonic Temple. The foint fair given last week by Hope Council, No. 1, Daughters of Liberty, and Putnam Council, No. 2, U. A. M., will be continued this evening and tomorrow. In tained the Caledonian Club and their view of the praiseworthy objects of the friends at their "social" last Friday even- fair, and the many attractive features of the entertainment itself, the attendance ought to be large and liberal. A handsome ing was presented on Saturday evening to Mr. Harry Park, the well-known bicyclist, who has entertained the fair audiences nightly with his remarkable feats in fancy riding, on behalf of the two organizations. Miss Emma Greenwell made a neat little presentation speech. For this evening and morrow, various militia organizations have en invited, and the popular arrangement of placing the floor after 10 o'clock at the disposal of those who wish to dance will be continued.

The Capital City Dramatic Company. The Capital City Dramatic Company made its first bow to the public at the hall of the Martyn College of Oratory on Friday, and when the time came the curtain rose on a sea of interested faces, while some could not even get within the portals to catch a glimpse of the coming Siddons, Jeffersons, Bernhardts and Irvings beyond. The company is a new one, made up of the leading figures in a number of amateur dramatic organizations of the city, and three bright and lively plays were presented. An amusing one-act farce, "Obliging a Friend," was first performed, with Mr. Robert W. Test, Mr. Edwards, Miss Jane R. Young and Miss Grace Ross. Miss Helen Biddis was unable to take the part of Susan at the last moment, and Miss Alice Irwin can the rescue, taking her place and doing excellently. The second thing on the bill was of peculiar interest in that it was an original one-act drama by two of the chief organizers of the company, Mr. Will-iam T. Kirby and Mr. Philip H. Buckler, and was successfully presented for the first time about a year ago. Mr. Kirby won much applause for his work, as did Mr. Buckler also, and Miss Alice Irwin gave one of the most genuinely artistic presentations of the evening. The entertainment was brought to a close with that sparkling little sketch, "Ruth's Romance," in which Miss Lou Ennis, Mr. Buckle, and Mr. Kirby were seen to good advantage. The manager of the company is Mr. William T. Kirby, and Mr. P. H. Buckler acted as stage manager for the performers, while the music was supplied by an orchestra under the direction of Prof. Chase. The members of the Capital City Dramatic Company include Miss Alice Irwin of the East Washington Dramatic Company, Miss Lou Ennis of the Unexpected Guests Company, Miss Grace Ross, leading lady in the Washington Amateur Dramatic Company; Miss Jane R. Young of the Rivals Company, Miss Helen Biddis of the Wash Company, Miss Helen Biddis of the Wash-ington Amateur Dramatic Company, Mr. Robert W. Test, last summer with Charles B. Hanford in "Ingomar;" Mr. D. M. Ed-wards, formerly leading man of the Unexpect d Guests Company, and Messrs William T. Kirby and P. H. Buckler, also of the East Washington Dramatic Company.

Photo-Mechanical Engraving. In his last lecture at the National Museum, Mr. Koehler began the description of the photo-mechanical processes of engraving. "These methods," he said, "were the consequence of the commercial spirit of the nineteenth century. Photography was introduced as an agent because it was more accurate in its delineations than even the most skillful artists, and in many scientific researches it is almost indispensable. Nature moves by unvarying laws, and must produce a faithful copy of the original. Photography alone, however, is slow and costly, and has other draw is slow and costly, and has other draw-backs, so it is used only to produce a copy from which others may be printed. This method of engraving is not the outgrowth of the wonderful development of the art of photographing, but the latter is the out-growth of the former. One great drawback in photography is that, as yet, we are unable to reproduce different colors satisfac-torily, and it even changes the general ef-fect of the color of the original in some cases, although this is now, in a great measure, overcome by the ortho-chromatic process. Aithough this method is intended to do away with the necessity for skillful artists and engravers, it is still necessary to use a great amount of skill in each of the various stages that are gone through with. We may still look for great develop-ment in this art, which is of comparatively recent origin. By this method any of the plano-graphic, may be produced."

The lecturer gave a short description of he chemical changes that occur in photography, with practical illustrations of some of the steps, and exhibited some of the more ordinary chemicals used. He also explained the difference between a negative and a positive, after which he spoke of the different properties of albumen and gela tine, as used in photography.

Wherever practicable, views were shown, illustrating the various features that made ip the text of the lecture.
